Pseudo-Baedeker Guide

154. Baedekers Spezialführer für das Frühlings-Fest in "Etwa-Lugano".

Deutsche Verlags-Anstalt, Stuttgart [1895]. 8vo (15 x 10 cm), pp.48, previous owner's ink inscription, publisher's red boards, minor stains to upper cover; a very good copy.

Not in Hinrichsen.

Pseudo-Baedeker Guide for the Spring Festival in "Etwa-Lugano" (kind-of-Lugano), a fantasy location near a blue Alpine lake, a colony founded by women, who care less about geographical details. Travel advice includes: "If of an excitable nature, the wearing of dark glasses is recommended because of the blinding beauty of the women." The list of acting participants at the end suggests that this was an "insider publication" directed at a small number of people who enjoyed a charity event.

An unusual and amusing piece of Baedekeriana.

166. Handbook for Southern Germany; Being a Guide to Württemberg, Bavaria, Austria, Tyrol, Salzburg, Styria, &c, The Austrian and Bavarian Alps, and the Danube from Ulm to the Black Sea.

John Murray, London 1871. Eleventh edition. 8vo, pp. xii, 635, 64 adverts dated 1871 on yellow paper at rear, small piece (approx 1 cm) missing from top right corner first page of adverts, 21 maps and plans including folding map at rear, original variant red morocco gilt binding; a very good copy.

Lister 45

Endpapers dated "June 1875".

This guide covered Austria and Southern Germany in the aftermath of the "Seven Weeks War" or the "Austro-Prussian War". The Prussians defeated the Austrians and after the War Prussia became much more dominant in Germany and this eventually led to a united Germany under the Prussian leader King Wilhelm.

This copy has the unusual variant red morocco binding sometimes used by Murray at this time.

302. HOWARD, Alexander. Howard's Guide to Jerusalem and vicinity. with map of Palestine.

Howard's Hotel, Jaffa and Jerusalem. 1888 First edition. 8vo (18 x 13 cms), portrait, 111pp, folding map of Palestine and Syria with an inset map of Jerusalem and its environs, advert, scattered spotting throughout, slight dampstaining to rear pastedown, , original purple cloth, gilt lettered, slightly spotted; overall a very good copy.

Chevalier Alexander Howard, otherwise known as Iskander Awad, was a local proprietor of two hotels in Jaffa and Jerusalem. He became famous for successfully suing the Baedeker company in the High Court in London for making disparaging remarks about his hotel in Jaffa. Baedekers were ordered to remove the remarks. They not only removed the remarks in the next edition, they in fact deleted all references to both his hotels in their guides. This in the end greatly affected Howard's business and he suffered financial hardship.

It is interesting to note in the rear of this guide Howard has included several pages of glowing testimonials for all his hotels.

This charming hotel guide contains very attractive illustrations by the artist Bertha Lum.

The city has been renamed several times. During the Jin Dynasty, the city was known as Zhongdu, and then later under the Mongol Yuan Dynasty as Dadu in Chinese and Daidu to Mongols. Twice in the city's history, the name was changed from Beijing (Peking) to Beiping (Peiping), literally "Northern Peace". This occurred first under the Hongwu Emperor of the Ming Dynasty, and again in 1928 with the Kuomintang (KMT) government of the Republic of China. On each occasion, the name change removed the element meaning "capital" (jing or king) to reflect the fact the national capital had changed to Nanjing. The city's name was also twice changed from Beiping (Peiping) to Beijing (Peking).
